HONGKONG, MARCH 4TH, 1868.

MORE and more distinctly as time passes does the public opinion of the colony declare itself adverse to the destruction of the Mint. The subject, in spite of that conference with the bankers, has not yet been quite fairly treated. The bankers were summoned to the meeting without any previous warning; they came altogether unprepared to deal with the matter, and had no opportunity to discuss the question amongst themselves. A very different result might have ensued if they had received three or four days notice from the Government, and had been enabled to concert a policy in the first instance before being called on to commit themselves definitely. We are not making any statement, it will be understood, on behalf of the bankers, we are writing altogether on the public facts of the transaction, but a merely superficial view of the affair leads one to imagine that the bankers might not have been willing at the conference, when speaking without preparation to make offers or suggestions which they might have been prepared to make after due time for consideration. Another point has to be considered in reference to the whole affair. At a conference about the affairs of the Mint, it is very strange that the Mint should have been unrepresented by the officer at its head. A Master of the Mint, like the captain of a ship, may very often, no doubt, take a more enthusiastic view of his craft than others would be inclined to do, but at the same time he may be able to suggest some ideas on the subject which would not occur to other persons. Why Mr. KINDER was left out of the conference of the other day we cannot understand. If he holds any unsound views on the subject of the Mint, it is hardly probable that their exposition would be injurious in the face of the collective financial wisdom of the colony. Of course, the Government of Hongkong is conducted on a principle which leaves no room for the community to say or do anything by its own independent action. If the Governor likes to shut up the Mint, or burn it, or turn it into a lunatic asylum, there is nothing to be done; but, if the community is consulted at all about an important measure, we think it has a distinct claim to be consulted seriously.

If this Mint problem is to be dealt with earnestly, and if all reasonable efforts are to be made to keep the institution alive, there are a great many things which might be done still. It must surely be accepted as the fundamental proposition, about which all persons are agreed, that if the Mint can be kept up in readiness for contingencies which may arise, without being, meanwhile, a heavy burden to the colony, such a course ought to be followed. There are two ways in which it is possible that this result might be accomplished. It remains to be seen whether the banks would not rather undertake to coin a given number of dollars each per annum, than see the Mint destroyed, or the problem might be solved another way. The Mint, as we suggested the other day, might be, so to speak, put out of commission and laid up in ordinary, without being broken up and sold off, and, in order to retain the opportunity of re-instating it at some future time, it might be worth the while of the banks to subscribe the limited cost of its maintenance, on the footing supposed. Again, it might be worth the while of the colony itself to go to that small expense, rather than see the place, on which such enormous sums have been sunk, finally annihilated. Yet another course might be feasible. A company might be formed to work the Mint under a Government charter. That course would perhaps be a little unusual, but there is nothing in the idea radically incompatible with the functions a Mint has to discharge. Indeed, the coinage of Great Britain is largely manufactured by private enterprise in Birmingham manufactories, which are nothing in the world else but private mints. We should say it would be quite possible in Hongkong, just now, to organize a Mint company, which should take the establishment at East Point off the hands of the Government, on terms which would not in any way outrage the dignity of the Government, and would leave it all necessary control over the operations of the Mint.

Embodying much that has been said in the colony since the Mint conference was held, we do, therefore, make an emphatic appeal to the Government on behalf of the Mint. The conference which has been held on the subject, though very fairly intended, we make no doubt at all, proved abortive by reason of the hurried manner in which it was called together. If the Mint be closed now, as the question at present stands, there is but one thing that will be said in the place to the end of time, namely, that the GOVERNOR had conceived an animosity to the Mint, and shut it up in spite of remonstrance, and liberal offers from the financial community, when he might have kept it in readiness for better times at no expense to the colony. We know that the veterans of the public service care very little personally about what "is said" of their acts, but at the same time it is always desirable, when that is feasible, that a Government should not alone do right, but be known to do right, be comprehended and regarded in a friendly spirit. Moreover, in this Mint matter we believe that positive and tangible results would accrue from an open, candid, and conciliatory policy on the part of the Government just now. Another conference might be held under circumstances better conducive to success than those which prevailed before. The conference might be appointed for a fortnight in advance of the invitations, and its circle might be somewhat extended. Above all, the Government might intimate that it would be prepared to take into consideration offers from a sufficiently responsible and trustworthy body of men, to form a company, for taking over the establishment as it stands, and working it at their own expense.

Police Intelligence, March 3rd.

BEFORE E. W. GOODLAKE, ESQ.

ASSAULT ON BOARD THE "BELTED WILL."

James Goodie, able seaman, on board the Belted Will, was charged with being drunk, and assaulting his officer.

Mr. John W. Gardiner, second officer of the Belted Will, stated that yesterday, when he was on the quarter deck, the prisoner, who was the worse of liquor, came up to him, called him a foul name, and struck him in the face.

Capt. Locke, who was in court, said the prisoner was a good seaman, and had behaved well, but that when the crew had money given them, they all got drunk.

Mr. Goodlake said it was well for the prisoner that his Captain gave him a good character. He should pay a fine of five dollars, or one week's hard labour.

THE GREAT CUTTING AND WOUNDING CASE.

In this case, Lum-a-fook, accountant, Fung-a-chee, interpreter, and Lo-a-lee, coolie, who had given evidence for the defence in the case at the Supreme Court, and had there committed perjury, and also been identified as having aided and abetted in the assault, for which two men were convicted at the sessions. Some days back we gave the result of the first appearance in the Police Court of the three delinquents, and the arrangements made between the bench and counsel engaged, for a remand until to-day, the prisoners being admitted to bail, two securities of $2,500 for Lum-a-fook and Fung-a-chee, and one security for $1,000 for Low-a-lee.

On the case being called this morning, the prisoners did not answer to their names, and Mr. Whyte, who was retained for the defence, informed their worships that he withdrew from the case, as he had been informed by Mr. Caldwell that the men had "bolted," but he would, nevertheless, ask their worships to give the bail time to find the runaways. Mr. Goodlake said he did not think he had power to give the bail time, the proper way would be to estreat the recognizances, and afterwards, should the men be forthcoming by Saturday or Monday, to have the money refunded by petitioning the Governor.

Mr. Hazeland said that was the way in which he himself thought the matter had better be settled. It was therefore understood that the bail recognisances be estreated, and that the bail will make every endeavour to catch the men. The bail in the case are Chun-sung-lai, opium dealer, for two sums, $2,500 and $1,000, and Ho-an, owner of opium shop, No. 1, Queen's-road, $2,500, who when it became known that the prisoners had gone to Macao and did not return by Saturday, chartered the steamer Fame and went up to Macao, but could not take the men. However, now the bail will make an effort, and we hope to see the men secured before the week is out.

Four coolies were charged with assaulting one Ng-a-ching with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The complainant, Ng-a-ching, who is only just out of hospital, said he was on the Praya Central on the 27th ult. and wanted to carry some opium boxes, when the prisoners, who are coolies, beat him with bamboos. They were all fighting for the work, and the prisoners beat him to prevent him getting work. From the effects of his thrashing he became insensible. All the four prisoners attacked him, especially the two last. The witness was in the hospital since the 27th ult., and came out yesterday.

Another coolie said he was passing along the Praya Central on the 27th ultimo, when he saw the prisoners beating the complainant with bamboos and knock him down. He knew the prisoners as coolies.

Inspector Burton gave evidence to show how he, accompanied by another European constable and the brother of complainant, had gone to Tai-pin-shan, and there arrested the second prisoner in a garret. Three of them he recognised as old offenders.

Some difficulty arose as to the arrest of two of the prisoners, so the case was remanded until to-morrow, to get the evidence of an Indian constable.

Court of Summary Jurisdiction.

BEFORE JUDGE H. J. BALL.

WAN-a-loonge v. Lee-a-fook.—This case, which has already been postponed several times, was a suit by the plaintiff, who was formerly boy in the employ of Mr. Clarke, Assistant-Surveyor-General, and who was sentenced at the police-court some time since to two months' imprisonment for embezzling from his master; to recover from defendant, who was cook in the same employ, the value of his clothing, which he claims he placed in the safe keeping of defendant, who now refused to give them up. On a former occasion His Honor had postponed the case in order that he might consider the point, whether a person convicted of felony could sue for property that at the time was in his possession. He now decided that a person, who was a convicted felon, could not sue for property that there was in his possession, in fact, that he could not have property of his own, and held that plaintiff was in the position of a person convicted of felony. He nevertheless remarked to defendant that, if he had any clothes or property belonging to plaintiff, he was very dishonest, if he was retaining possession of them.

Ho-tak-chew, a sweetmeats dealer, had a small bill of $50.72½ against Mr. Munjaboy, and as he could not collect the account, a summons was taken out; but Munjaboy did not seem to think it worth while to put in an appearance or make any defence, and judgment was accordingly given for plaintiff.

C. Braga & Co. v. L. Barnes.—This was an action to recover $47.49, for medicines supplied and money lent. Defendant did not appear, and judgment went for plaintiff.

Registrar-General v. Wong-a-ho.—An action to recover $15.90 for hospital fees. Defendant admitted the debt, but asked for time. His Honor however said he could not grant any time, this was a question that must be referred to the Registrar-General.

Fawcett & Co. v. J. C. Burb.—This was an action to recover $27.00, but as defendant has already been adjudicated a bankrupt in the Supreme court, His Honor said plaintiff had better put in his claim as a creditor, and get his share of the dividend.

Six summonses were taken out against the proprietor of an establishment, known as the Café Cremer, but which has a short time since ceased to be a living institution, on account of the proprietor having made up his mind to take a tour through the United States, via San Francisco, without apprising his creditors of the fact. A rush has accordingly been made to the small cause court, to get what consolation the law gives in such cases. The victims of misplaced confidence are as follows:—H. O'Hara $94.70, Grau and Co. $197, Fawcett and Co. $91.90, Lammert, Atkinson and Co. $34.90, Yip-a-mun $16.25, Chew-yuen $102.82, in all $537.57. On questioning the bailiff of the court, it appeared that the summons had been served by tacking them upon the wall of the premises, but as His Honor held that it is was not good service, according to the requirements of the law, the cases were all marked "no service," and a personal service ordered to be made when opportunity offered. As Mr. Nicholas Cremer will doubtless take good care that no such opportunity is given, the plaintiffs cannot be congratulated on the probability of their recovering the amount of their claims.

Mun-a-she v. W. Budd.—This was an action brought to recover the amount of a bill of stores supplied defendant, who is gun-room steward of the Rodney. Defendant admitted $51 of the claim, but the dispute appeared to be about three hundredweight of corned beef supplied, which had turned out bad, and was thrown overboard. Plaintiff contended that defendant had ordered the beef at the Slaughter-house, and had not only tasted it before purchasing, but had seen some of it packed. All these facts were denied by defendant. He had ordered the beef on the 28th of last October. It came on board the 30th, two days after, and on the 31st it was opened, found to be putrid, and accordingly thrown overboard. This was at sea, and accordingly it could not have been returned to plaintiff. Defendant called two jolly tars, the butcher's mate and cooper, both of whom substantiated the above statement, and deposed to the putrid condition of the beef. The butcher gave it his opinion that the meat had not been corned long enough, otherwise it ought to have kept sweet three months at least. Judgment was given for the plaintiff for $51, the amount admitted, and paid into court by defendant, His Honor remarking that plaintiff had not proved that the beef he supplied was fresh, and such as would have kept, and furthermore he could not expect defendant to pay for a quantity, so bad that they were unable to use it.

Plaintiff did not seem to like the idea of his beef having been thrown overboard, even though it was rotten, and very coolly remarked that, there were a good many Chinamen on board the ship, why did they not give the meat to them?

Penang.

The inhabitants of Penang have addressed a petition to the House of Commons remonstrating against the provisions in the new postal contract, by which their settlement is left out in the cold. We read in the petition:—

That an intimation of the proposed exclusion of this settlement from the Eastern mail line was given to the Mercantile community here, or to the Merchants in the United Kingdom, interested in the trade of the settlement, and consequently they have had no opportunity of remonstrating against such exclusion, of making representation to Her Majesty's Post Master General to meet the objection that was offered by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company to the mail packets continuing to touch at this port, or of appealing to your Hon'ble House to withhold your approval of the contract unless the direct mails to this settlement were retained. Your Petitioners have no received any Official or other authoritative information respecting the nature of this objection, but they understand that it was alleged that the call of the packets at this port caused a deviation of two days from the direct voyage between Galle and Singapore. A reference to the chart will shew that the difference between the direct course from off Diamond Point to Pulo Jura, and the indirect course by Penang is not more than 70 to 80 miles, equal, at the contract rate of speed of 9½ miles an hour, to less than 9 hours, and if the stoppage at Penang be taken at, other 6 hours, the entire time lost on the voyage would at the utmost be 15 hours, and might, if necessary, be shortened. It appears that the Homeward mail will generally arrive at Singapore from Hongkong only two days after the arrival there of the Outward mail from Galle, so that even if the Government of this Colony were able to hire steamers for the conveyance of the mails between Singapore and Penang, the Merchants of this port could not reply to letters from their Home correspondents until the next fortnight's mail.

That this settlement has enjoyed the benefit of direct communication by the mail packets with India, the United Kingdom and the Continent of Europe for the last twenty-two years, and the consequence has been a very great development of its European trade, especially that with the United Kingdom, as well as of its trade with the adjacent Malay and Siamese countries, by which the former is mainly fed. The trade of this port is still steadily progressing but the cessation of the stimulus which it derives from the regularity of its mail communication with Europe will cause it to retrograde. Before postal communication by the mail packets was established, scarcely more than one ship cleared out yearly from this port to Great Britain. In the 10 years from 1st January, 1836 to 31st December, 1845, only 20 ships with a total measurement of 8,400 tons, loaded here for the United Kingdom. During the first ten years from the establishment of the mail packets, 1st January, 1846 to 31st December, 1855, the number was 96 ships, with a tonnage of 35,350 tons, or four times that of the preceding ten years. During the next ten years, 1856 to 1865, the tonnage was more than doubled, the number of vessels that loaded here being 165, with a tonnage of 76,120 tons. The annual average for the past 9 years has been 18 ships, with a tonnage of 8,200 tons, so that one year's tonnage is now equal to that of the ten years that preceded the establishment of the mail packets.

When the settlement was founded 83 years ago it was without population or trade. In 1810 the value of the trade had reached £1,100,024, and as an incontestible proof of the great stimulus which it afterwards derived from the mail packets, it advanced very little during the next 35 years, the amount in 1845 being no more than £1,148,994. The effect of the establishment of the mail packets in 1845 was immediately felt, the annual average rising, in the first 5 years thereafter, from £1,203,857 to £1,549,993. At the expiration of the first 10 years, 1855, it had doubled, and it is now more than trebled, the value of the imports for last year being £1,811,301 5s. 3d., and that of the exports £3,530,379 3s. 3d.; forming a total of £5,341,680 8s. 6d.

The average value of the trade with the United Kingdom for 5 years before the mail was established, 1841-2 to 1845-6 inclusive, was only £78,985. In the next 5 years, 1846-7 to 1850-1 inclusive, it rose to £169,618, and in the following 5 years, to £200,185. It has continued to improve since, the average for the last 6 years for which returns have been published, 1860-1 to 1865-6 amounting to £632,324. The trade with the Continent of Europe and the United States has increased in like proportion, and taking it and the trade with Great Britain together the annual average for the same 6 years amounts to £318,100. Before the war in America broke out, the total was over a million.

During 22 years of direct mail communication with Europe the capital invested in trade and agriculture has very greatly increased. Six additional European mercantile houses, carrying on business on a large scale, a Branch of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China, and several Bank agencies have been established, and for three branches of Sea, Life and Fire Insurance Companies there are now thirty. The extensive Sugar, Tapioca, and Cocoanut Estates that have added so much to the agricultural wealth and to the trade of the settlements, have nearly all been formed during these 22 years, and the area under rice cultivation has been more than doubled. Native merchants of the settlement have formed agencies and entered into tin-mining and other branches of industry in adjacent countries, by which these countries have greatly benefited, their Governments and inhabitants being enriched and led to detach themselves from the predatory and piratical pursuits to which they were formerly addicted, while this improvement in their condition has reacted most favourably on the prosperity of this Island.

If any additional proof is wanted of the extent to which the commerce and general prosperity of Penang are dependent on the maintenance of the same regularity and rapidity of postal communication with Europe which is enjoyed by Singapore, it is furnished by Malacca, the advantages of which in geographical position and fertility of soil once made it the emporium of the Farther East, but which not participating in the improved postal communication, has been cut off from the current of European mercantile enterprize, and, with a larger territory and native population than either of the sister settlements and marching with native states which contain some of the richest Tin and Gold producing districts in the Peninsula, has remained stagnant, not a single ship loading there for Europe, and not a single European firm or planter being now established there. The risk to which the trade of Penang will be exposed of retrograding in the same manner, if the port be deprived of its present regular mails, is now greatly increased by the establishment of free Dutch Ports on the opposite side of the Straits, in the countries from which Penang has drawn the Pepper and other commodities which figure so largely in the returns of the trade.

The 12th article is the new contract with the P. & O. S. N. Co., empowers the Post Master General to increase or decrease the frequency of the mails, and to extend the service to ports not specified in the contracts, any alteration in the subsidy thereby rendered necessary, to be mutually agreed on or settled by arbitration. Under this stipulation it is competent to the Post Master General to require the mail packets to continue to touch at Penang, and their doing so would not put the Company to any additional expense but the trifling value of the coal consumed in the 9 hours of deviation under steam.

That the correspondence of this port by the mail packets has been rapidly increasing, and now amounts to about 32,000 letters and 36,000 Newspapers annually, from the accelerating rate at which the trade has increased and may be expected to continue to increase, if the mail service is retained, it is probable that the correspondence will be doubled in less than five years.

Appended to the petition are various tables of interest, amongst others the following:—

The Character of the Chinese.

(From the Supreme Court and Consular Gazette.)

A good honest word has been frequently used of late in reference to the style of criticism of the Chinese, which has by degrees come into vogue among a class who seem gradually to be obtaining very considerable influence with the public at home. It was briefly described as "cant," and we must confess that it would probably have been difficult to find an expression better fitted for it. Nobody can believe in the sincerity of those who profess such unbounded admiration for Chinese institutions and for the Chinese people, as we hear given utterance to in various directions, and few who observe the course of events can doubt that much of the praise which is lavished upon the Chinaman, has its origin either in a certain fanciful pedantry, or, directly or indirectly, in interested motives. We do not mean to say that there is on the part of those who sing the praises of the native of Cathay, any intentional desire to deceive; but it would be absurd to deny that they are influenced in no small degree by those various considerations of personal advantage, which in all places make men advocates and partisans. Lord Derby is an admirable man in the eyes of those who have friends in the Conservative camp. He is utterly reprehensible among others who have interest only with the Liberals. Similarly, John Chinaman is a great hero to those whom he pays well and promotes to honour and dignity, and is heartily abused by others in the way of whose progress he stands, propped up by the strength of his willing foreign cooperators. There is no doubt that upon the part of the latter, he is far too much abused; but there, is equally no doubt that he is in far too much extolled by the former. A true estimate of his merits and defects can only be obtained by making large deductions from what is said on either side; but it is at first a little surprising that the tendency of the uninformed has been always to give credence to those who speak in the Chinaman's favour, and to disbelieve those who have anything to urge against him. It may be worth while to enquire how this peculiar tendency has arisen, and to point out where the fallacy of the views entertained chiefly lies.

There is among a very large class of Europeans a commendable feeling that the superior force of Western nations should not be unjustly used to coerce weaker peoples into submission to their views. This has arisen in many cases—we should be glad if we could say in all—from a laudable dislike to see the weak in any way oppressed by the strong; and we are free to admit that up to a certain point, the feeling is not only generous and admirable, but also reasonable and practical. It is as little in accordance with the interests as it is with the dignity of a great nation to use its strength unscrupulously against its less favoured neighbours. Such a course must inevitably give rise to an amount of responsibility which it cannot be desirable for a nation to incur; though a certain amount of responsibility of this nature must be faced by any nation whose prosperity depends upon trade, and which is consequently compelled to enter into relations with foreign powers. From fear, however, that this may be increased to an extent that may not be in accordance with the interests of the country, certain writers have gone so far as to ignore its existence altogether; and to argue that every nation, no matter what its system, will do better when left to itself than if in any way influenced or interfered with by what, rightly or wrongly, we deem a superior civilization. To maintain this position, they are naturally interested in making the inhabitants of such countries appear in as favourable a light as possible. To admit that their system is faulty, and requires improvement, is to give up a certain amount of the ground; and this, as their position is at best somewhat slippery, its maintainers are by no means inclined to do. They, therefore, swallow with surprising avidity all reports which tend to make the above named point; and nothing that can be said in favour of a native is deemed by them too extravagant for credence. In this manner a demand for favourable views of the natives of distant countries arises, and we have above shown how the supply originates.

A certain number of men feel a degree of pride in seeing extraordinary virtues in a people like the Chinese. To discover these treasures hidden from ordinary eyes, seems to betoken an amount of creditable erudition and penetration; and it is flattering to a man to feel that he can regard a question from a higher standing point than his neighbours. Hence a certain number of those who have had an opportunity of forming opinions about the people of this country, paint them in glowing colours, and are extolled by a large class at home, as men of extraordinary knowledge and penetration. Others who, as before noticed, are gradually led to the same views from motives, direct or indirect, of interest—and these are now an increasing class—give utterance to the same opinions, and are listened to with equal attention. That the views of such speakers are biassed in any way by their interests, is never for a moment suspected; but, on the other hand, those who advocate any different theory are immediately declared to be merely looking to their own interests, and "Mercantile greed," "buccaneering," and a whole vocabulary of similar invective is hurled without stint at their devoted heads.

We shall not be suspected of in any way favouring those violent prejudices against China and the Chinese that have been often expressed in conversations, and the columns of the local press, when we say that we cannot help believing that the apologists for the native of this country have altogether overestimated his capabilities, and that amidst some exaggeration there is still much truth in what has been said on the other side. Our reason for coming to this conclusion is, that while, upon abstract grounds, the Chinaman is extolled to the skies, his greatest admirers are not prepared to uphold his superiority so soon as any practical test or standard is brought to bear upon the question. His civilization is lauded as very high; but if we take any test of civilization, a frank admission is at once made that in that particular point, he falls short. In law, in administration, in mechanical arts, in social rules, China is admittedly utterly deficient; but it is held that, notwithstanding these results from it, her system is worthy of admiration. Similarly, as to the character and capacity of the natives, they are admitted by all to act underhandedly and dishonestly; but it is pleaded that they are not so naturally, but from the force of habit, and as the result of the system of rule and education throughout the country. Admitting this last assertion to be true (and we are fully convinced it is) what can be said in favour of that system which, while it fails to obtain good material results, brings about the lowest development of individual character? There is assuredly great inconsistency in the two positions above named; and the truth is that the defects both as to administration and character have their origin in one cause, the want of honesty in the whole system upon which Chinese civilization, and Chinese character as a part of that civilization, are based. When in the highest departments of state corruption of the grossest description exists, and no effort is made to check it, how can it be expected that the character of the Chinese will be otherwise than corrupt and temporising? No man can entirely separate himself from the state of society surrounding him; few can do so at all; and where the example of the higher and governing classes is is bad, it is scarcely to be expected that the practice of the bulk of people will be otherwise. The fact is, we find the Chinaman very much what a previous knowledge of his country's institutions would lead us to suppose him. He is systematic, practical, worldly; neither his hopes nor his principles are high; he looks to the main chance; is a diplomatist by nature, never losing sight of the end in view, and steadily persevering in working for it. His social habits are in accordance with the want of enthusiasm in his character; he aims at personal comfort; he proves his food before his clothes; his clothes before his dwelling, and regards all art as the exhibition rather of human skill than of the beauties of nature. In his moral character, though we find him far from incapable of good feeling and kindly action, there is throughout a want of principle and a tendency to temporise, which makes him uncertain, vacillating and insincere.

Such, we think, is a fair statement of the average Chinaman's character; which it will be at once noticed is negative rather than positive; and it is this peculiar negativeness that makes him so little inclined to adopt or appreciate improvements. He looks rather to avoiding evil than attaining good, and is content to leave defects unaltered until by circumstances he is forced to amend them. He is civilized, no doubt; but his civilization is not of a high nature, and if developed to its utmost, would be but a good order of things for three or four hundred years ago, unsuited altogether to the present day.

The Hong System.

(From the "Shanghai Recorder.")

In recently alluding to the extravagant expenditure, which has long characterised the various houses in Shanghai, and has militated more than anything else against the success of the place, we pointed out that the chief cause of this unsatisfactory state of things was the system long in force, but now happily beginning to be broken into, of the clerks and partners in houses living together. To this subject we have very frequently made allusion, and may almost be wearying our readers by recurring to it; but so long as the old system continues to any great extent, we cannot deem that sufficient attention has been called to it, as it is one so entirely opposed to all reason and sense that in the course of time, like all things not supported by a sound basis, it must give way to the advance of opinion and the progress of events.

The old hong system is in fact the most ingenious device for living uncomfortably and expensively that could possibly be hit upon. Juniors with a limited number of hundreds per annum are compelled daily to sit down to, and indirectly to pay for dinners fit for princes, which they do not want, in society which they do not care for, and too often, subjected to an amount of snubbing which the most good natured man cannot endure without feeling a little ruffled; while if they ask a friend to the table at which an august Taipan presides, they probably have the pleasure of seeing him "haw-hawed" over, in a manner which is irritating or amusing according to the disposition of the recipient. It is not to be wondered at that, under such circumstances, young men find very little attraction in the society which surrounds them at their own houses, and that an intimation that the B— or the C— are coming to dinner, is sufficient to send them off at the best of their speed to old so and so, where, though they may have a plain dinner, they can at least enjoy a sociable evening without an amount of humiliation, which the most arrant truckler would not voluntarily submit to for the benefit of associating with the highest in the land.

We do not say that the heads of houses are altogether to blame for the little inconveniences of this kind which arise. Probably the kindest hearted and best meaning man could scarcely prevent there being some restraint and reservation, when he has to associate with the juniors in his office. However much consideration he might himself be willing to show them, he would very likely find some of his friends not so liberal minded as himself. Therefore we do not blame any particular persons, but we do blame the system, which forces a young man into society, where, we will not say he is not treated as an equal, but where he scarcely receives so much consideration as a country gentleman would show to his smallest tenants, whom he might receive on a state occasion. If a man forces himself into society which is, or thinks itself, better than he, he has but himself to thank if he be snubbed; but it is not fair that he should, by a silly social custom, be compelled to come where he is not wanted; more especially if he is thereby deprived of a portion of his emoluments, which he would easily find means to spend more reasonably than in extravagant living.

The point to which we wish to draw special attention is this, that the style of living under the Hong system, is altogether beyond the requirements, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, not in accordance with the wishes of man who desires in, the course of a few years, to save something tangible from his income. Taking all things into account, wines, stores, and honseboy's expenses, it is a moderate estimate to set down the cost of living of every man in a house at not less than £200 to £250 per annum, and his proportion of the rent of the Hong may fairly be estimated at another £50 to £100, or in other words, we may say that he costs his firm something like £300 per annum for board and lodging. The income of a clerk in a house varies from about £300 to £600 or £700, and it will be seen at a glance, how unfair it is that the junior should be saddled with the same expenses for living as his older and far higher paid fellow clerk, that is to say, that a man with an income of £600 should have to live at the rate as one receiving £1,000. This is the first and most obvious reason why the system is absurd; but next, look at the amount that could be accomplished by the junior clerk with his £600, compared with what he gets by it under present circumstances. It is certain that from such a sum scarcely anything is now saved; whereas if he lived his own way in a bungalow in the suburbs, he might well cover all his expenses with Tls. 100 a month, if not less, and would be twice as comfortable as at present; while if the plan of living away from business became general, those in receipt of higher salaries would be able, if they liked, be married, and settle down, instead of passing the dreary and unsatisfactory lives they are doomed to under the present system.

The advantage to the merchant himself would be, not only the sum he would be able to save by an actual reduction in salaries, but also the indirect saving by being himself able to regulate his expenditure as he liked; while as the juniors, we have heard of people living in the country in the neighbourhood, very comfortably and respectably, upon sums that would seem absurdly small to those basing their ideas upon the average of Shanghai expenditure.

There is no special ground, apart from the obvious social benefits which the change would bring, upon which we would advocate it, namely that if the men in houses settled down and married, we should soon find that we had, that much despised, but necessary element in society—the steady going middle-aged men. Half the mismanagement in China has really resulted from too young and too inexperienced men being placed at the head of affairs. If life here were more natural and reasonable we should soon find a more permanent class springing up, and this there can be no question would be in every way beneficial to the place.

NEWS FROM THE NORTH.

By the Sunonada, from Shanghai, we have dates to February 29th. There is no news of any importance. The following items are from the North China Daily News:—

A new Masonic Lodge is to be opened at Ningpo on the 29th. A number of Brethren of the Order left yesterday afternoon by the Kiangse, to assist at the ceremony.

The barques Kew-kee and Talee were sold on the 24th for Taels 9,450 and 11,000 respectively.

So much has been said about the insufficient rank of the Chinese attachés of the new embassy which leaves us this morning, that it may be well to give a complete list of its members and their relative standing. Mr. Burlingame's rank as Minister Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, and that of Mr. J. McL. Brown and M. de Champs as first and second Secretaries is well known. Next come two Natives, Chih-ta-jên and Sun-ta-jên, the former a Mancho Tartar, the latter a Chinese, both in the second grade of officials—that is to say, ranking on the civil list with a Vice-President of a Board at Peking, or with a Governor of a Province. They have been Secretaries in the Foreign office since its establishment, and are both reputed intelligent men. They go with the rank of "High Minister." Next come six student interpreters, who have been studying for the last five or six years at the Foreign school in Peking; two who accompanied Pin on his excursion, two years ago, speak fair English, two French, and two Russian. Two writers, a doctor, and fifteen or sixteen servants complete the catalogue.

Hankow.

Messrs. Gower, Lord, Jerdein and Holberton have been elected Stewards for the Spring Races. The following paragraph announces a curious literary "strike."

The Shoaw-kan candidates for the "littlego" of the B. A. degree, have beaten the district magistrate of that place, and refused to sit at their examinations. This has is called pa kau, or the literary "strike," by which the matriculating or graduating students express from time to time their sense of disapprobation of some offending mandarin, whose connection with their examination they thus indignantly resent.

It appears that in addition to minor offences against the Confucian code, this blue buttoned officer has been a kind of Blue-beard, having ill-treated his former wife, and married another, more equal in rank and condition. He is of the military school, like the majority of the present holders of civil offices. Between such and the literary body, there is perpetual feud and fight, in resentment of this usurpation of offices primarily the reward of literary excellence.

NAVVIES.—"Navvy" is synonymous in most minds with a very rough and powerful man, and justly so. None but very hardy men could possibly execute the work of the navvies. It is but little known, however, that a very severe ordeal has to be undergone by the novice, failing in which his plume and spurs were cut off, figuratively speaking, and he could not hope to be admitted into the honourable company of excavators. The men looked with jealousy and dislike upon each new comer, especially if he came, as soon grew to be the case, from any of the southern or western counties; and they took pleasure in making his entrance to his new life as disagreeable as possible. The novice was bound to wheel a barrow all day long from the spot where the men were filling to another twenty-two yards off; twenty-two yards, from some accidental cause, no doubt, came to be fixed all over England as the distance to which the navvies, when digging a cutting, were bound to remove their earth. So skilful were the diggers at piling this on the shallow, insignificant-looking barrows, which the reader has doubtless often noticed, that the load would sometimes weigh more than eight hundredweight, and result to the chin of the wheeler. But this wheeler must wheel it, or fall, and be scouted for good and all, from that district at any rate, as a navvy. Those who succeeded did so by wonderful strength and pluck—there is no word but "pluck" which conveys exactly what I mean. A man has been seen to wheel his load, a load piled up by cunning and spiteful hands, with the blood coming all day long from between his fingers. All that could be done to taunt and deter the novice was done, yet no one more admired the triumphant stranger than the very men who had sought to baulk him. There was, moreover, a sort of guarantee for fair play, the man who filled the barrow for the novice had to wheel it for a few yards himself. The road of plank from the excavation to the spoil-heap forked as it approached the diggings; the empty barrow was brought along one, the full barrow was taken along the other; but the digger always had, and has now, to wheel it to the junction. If he could not wheel it, neither need the novice, and the fellow was fined pretty heavily. Those among the novices whose pockets were well supplied to enable them to stand plenty of beer during the first day or two of their probation, got off a great deal better, in the way of lightly-filled barrows, than did their poorer comrades.—Cassell's Magazine.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Tuesday Evening.

There is no change to report in the Drug market. Transactions to-day have been on a limited scale, at the following rates: New Patna $702½; New Benares $685; Old Patna $672½; Old Benares $673½ to $680; second sales New Patna $682½ to $683½; Malwa, $700 to $795, with sellers.

There has been some inquiry to-day from the Chinese for piece goods, but they as yet evince great caution in approaching the market. A few sales are reported, including 200 pieces 7lb. This was part of a large purchase by a foreign speculator, made last week, of 25,000 pieces, to arrive, at $2.80 to $2.87½. Cotton has been dull again, and only 18 bales Bengal were placed, at $13.90 to $16. There has been rather more doing in Produce to-day, but the market presents no new feature. With the exception of a very material advance in Steamboats, there is nothing to report in shares. Of these over 400 have been placed at par, and there are further sellers at this rate.

For a Newspaper or Price Current via Southampton, 6 Cents.
For a Newspaper or Price Current via Marseilles, 8 Cents.
Prepayment of the postage is compulsory in each case.
Special attention is directed to the following Rules and Regulations, which will be strictly enforced:—

AS REGARDS BOOKS.
A Book Packet may contain any number of separate Books, Almanacks, Maps, or Prints, and any quantity of paper, vellum or parchment (to the exclusion of letters whether sealed or open); and the Books, Maps, Paper, &c., may be either printed, written, or plain, or any mixture of the three.
All legitimate binding, mounting, or covering of the same, or of a portion thereof, will be allowed, whether such binding be loose or attached; as also rollers in the case of prints, markers (whether of paper or otherwise) in the case of books, and in short whatever is necessary for the safe transmission of literary or artistic matter or usually appertains thereto.
Every book packet must be either without a cover, or in a cover open at the ends or sides. It must not contain any letter, open or sealed, nor any sealed enclosure whatever.
No packet must exceed two feet in length, breadth, or depth, exceeding these dimensions it cannot be forwarded through the Post.

AS REGARDS PATTERNS.
They must not be of intrinsic value. This rule excludes all articles of a saleable nature, and indeed, whatever may have a value of its own, apart from its mere use as a pattern; and the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern must not be so great that it can fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.
There must be no writing or marks other than the address of the person for whom the packet is intended, a trade mark and numbers, and prices of the articles; otherwise the Packet will be detained or forwarded charged as an unpaid letter.
The Patterns must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be easy of examination. Samples however, of seeds, drugs, and so forth, which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, tied at the neck; bags so closed that they cannot readily be opened, even although they be transparent, must not be used for this purpose. Non-compliance with this rule will also subject the packet to be detained or forwarded as an unpaid letter.
The decision of the Postmaster General as to the eligibility of any Packet, pattern, or sample contained therein, to be forwarded under these regulations, will be final and conclusive.
The Packets, or the contents thereof must not contain any inclosure, sealed or otherwise closed against inspection.
In all other respects the general regulations of the Book Post will apply to the Pattern Post. Under these regulations, in order to prevent any interruption to the regular transmission of letters, a Packet of Patterns may, when it is necessary, be kept back for the following Mail, by which, in the ordinary course, it would be forwarded.
The rule which forbids the transmission through the Post of any article likely to injure the contents of the Mail Bags or Boxes, or the person of any Officer of the Post Office is of course, applicable to the Pattern Post; and a packet containing anything of the kind will be stopped, and not sent to its destination. Articles such as the following have been occasionally posted as Patterns, and have been detained as unfit for the Post, viz.: Metal boxes, porcelain and China fruit, vegetables, bunches of flowers, cuttings of plants, spurs, knives, scissors, needles, pins, pieces of machinery, sharp pointed instruments, samples of metals, samples in glass bottles, pieces of glass, acids of various kinds, curry combs, copper and steel engraving, plates and confectionery of all kinds.

The Reform Bill Year.
(From the Saturday Review.)

But England has had to go through worse things this year than can be caused by physical catastrophes or pecuniary losses. She has found herself tainted with a moral poison, and has witnessed the most audacious acts of assassination, murder, and general lawlessness committed in the midst of a peaceful and loyal society. Fenianism, and the Trades' Unions of Sheffield and Manchester, have shown that men with the hearts and feelings of savages may live and plot and work their will for a time in a country that thinks itself at the head of civilization. We knew something of Trades' Unions before, and were aware that there was something to be said both against and for them; and how much could be fairly said on either side it was entrusted to a Commission appointed early in the year to discover. The ordinary kind of strikes have gone on as usual. The engineers on the North-Eastern and the Brighton lines suddenly struck in the spring, and caused great temporary confusion; but the firmness of the Directors of the former railway gave, in the long run, a most useful lesson to those who thought they had the public at their mercy. For many months London was troubled with a great strike of tailors, and men who had been accustomed to the misery of wearing constantly new clothes were nearly learning the luxury of wearing old ones; when there, too, the masters prevailed; and the law being declared by Baron Bramwell to forbid picketing, the men acquiesced, and the struggle ended. But, if we were prepared for strikes, we were not prepared for the wholesale system of rattening and assassination and contrivances to disable hard-working men for life, which was disclosed as the ultimate fruit of Trades' Unions, when presided over by such men as Broadhead, and composed of such men as the sawgrinders of Sheffield and the brickmakers of Manchester. In the early part of the year a knot of demagogues, under the name of the Reform League, contrived to attract notice by mischievous meetings and demonstrations in London, and the Government, afraid to do anything unpopular, permitted serious infringements of public order, if not of peace, which have borne fruit in the increasing audacity of political desperadoes. The horror which the Sheffield revelations caused has, however, been eclipsed by the terror and indignation excited by the new place which Fenianism has assumed. That there should be a rising in Ireland seemed possible, and perhaps probable, as the continued influx of desperate adventurers from the United States, which prevented the fulfilment of the promise to restore the Habeas Corpus Act held out in the Queen's Speech, was known to be causing excitement in Ireland among classes too ignorant and reckless to appreciate the inevitable consequence. In the middle of February there was a very feeble outbreak in the south-west, and early in March a more serious movement threatened Dublin itself. But the rebels, who were mostly silly shopboys and persons equally unfitted for the realities of a campaign, were at once dispersed and driven to wander, and in many cases die, among the hills during a month of unusually cold weather. The rising was not thought serious enough to justify the punishment of death being inflicted on the guilty, and Burke, the most prominent prisoner, was spared, against the judgment of the Ministry, but in deference to the voice of general opinion. But it soon appeared that Fenianism was not to be confined to Ireland. Already an attempt so wild that it seemed scarcely credible had been made in February to seize Chester Castle; and in September Allen and his comrades startled the British public by their desperate, though successful endeavour to release Kelly and Deasy from the hands of the Manchester police. As on this occasion a policeman in the discharge of his duty was actually killed by the marauders, the three persons more immediately guilty of his death were most justly executed. This led to processions and mock-religious ceremonies, both here and in Ireland, in honour of the "martyrs," and it was only after twenty-six thousand persons had spent a Sunday in marching about Dublin, talking treason, that the Government made up its mind to forbid such gatherings. Scarcely had this been done when the whole country was startled into a burst of horror and indignation by the attempt to blow up the wall of the prison at Clerkenwell, in order that two of the prisoners might escape, and with entire indifference to the deaths and agonies and losses inflicted on the whole neighbourhood of poor people living hard by. The audacity of the attempt has had, however, the good effect of arousing London to defend itself by a general co-operation with the police, and its monstrous wickedness has had the good effect of doing more than anything else could have done to discredit Fenianism even among the Irish.

In English political history the bygone year will be chiefly known as the year of the Reform Bill. Now that some months have elapsed since the Bill was passed, we are getting more used to the fact, and its existence seems more natural, not because we can better estimate its effects, but because everything in political talk and purpose is now accommodated to the tenor of this famous measure. But no length of time diminishes the wonder with which we are filled when we bring back to recollection the history of the process by which the Bill came to be passed. In the beginning of February the Cabinet met Parliament without having come to the conclusion that a Reform Bill was necessary. At the end of October Mr. Disraeli informed his audience at Edinburgh that he had been for years educating his party to stand household suffrage, and that they had now learnt their lesson. Since the conversion of the Gothic hordes from Paganism there has been no conversion so multitudinous, so complete, so immediate. The squires have not only been told, but have been persuaded to believe, that henceforth the true secret of Conservative success is to trust to the wisdom and patriotism of a class of voters too abject, ignorant, and dependent for even Mr. Bright to wish that they should be entrusted with political power. The stages by which this wonderful result has been reached are so familiar that they may be briefly recounted. A paragraph about the Reform Bill, which left it open to the Ministers to do anything or nothing in the matter so that "the balance of the Constitution was preserved," was followed by a vague, hazy speech from Mr. Disraeli, introducing a set of impracticable Resolutions, through which however, two ideas transpired—that no class was to have the ascendancy, and that reductions of the franchise were to be accompanied by safeguards. The Resolutions were pronounced by unanimous opinion to be utterly useless, and at length, on the 25th of February, the Cabinet produced its famous Ten Minutes' Bill, so called from the amount of time which it had taken the Cabinet to decide on a vast change in the English Constitution. This Bill, disapproved of by all the persons who proposed it, was equally distasteful to both parties in the House of Commons and to the nation. Accordingly it was withdrawn, and another Bill was brought forward, based on household suffrage, with a variety of what were playfully called safeguards. Three of the ablest of Lord Derby's colleagues gave up office because they thought these safeguards illusory, but the rest of the Cabinet stood firm to office, and gradually discovered that these safeguards were not only illusory, but unnecessary. The House having a Bill thrown before it with which it was allowed to deal as it pleased, and a Ministry determined to pass a Reform Bill at all hazards, was determined to have a Bill passed, and swept away the opposition of Mr. Gladstone, who wished to reject the Bill because it was bad. Mr. Disraeli triumphed over his formidable rival by taking advantage of the personal unpopularity of the Opposition leader, and by convincing the majority of the House that if they did not support the Ministry they could have no Reform Bill, but that if they did support the Ministry they could have any Reform Bill they pleased. A decisive division was taken on the 13th of April, and a majority of twenty-one pronounced in favour of leaving the conduct of the Bill in the hands of Mr. Disraeli. All the safeguards proposed by the Ministry—the dual vote, educational franchises, voting papers, and two years' residence—were successively swept away, and even the terrible Compound Householder, who had sprung up almost accidentally as a guardian of Conservative principles, was all of a sudden buried in total oblivion. On one point only Mr. Disraeli was successfully firm. He would not extend his very limited scheme of redistribution; and as every one felt that a large extension of the scheme was only a question of time, and a very short time, if household suffrage was established, he had no real difficulty in carrying his point. The House of Lords expressed a profound and almost unanimous horror of the Bill; but it is possessed of far too much political experience to permit England to be brought to the deadlock which has paralysed all Government under the imitative Constitution of Victoria. It shut its eyes and boldly swallowed the poison-cup offered to it, merely contenting itself with instituting, in a feeble and invidious form, the representation of minorities. Finally, with the cheerful versatility of a constitutional sovereign, the Queen, in her speech at the end of the session, expressed the extreme pleasure with which she gave her assent to a Reform Bill, entirely opposite in every respect to the kind of Bill which in her speech at the beginning of the session she had been advised to foreshadow.
